Impact Report: The First Seven Years

Transforming Lives Through
Trauma-Informed Legal Advocacy.

IMAGINE:

Imagine the fear of filing for a divorce when your abuser has told you repeatedly that if you did, you will never see your children again.

You believe him.

Imagine, after yet another violent beating, you tell your abuser you and the children are leaving. He tells you he will kill you if you do so.

You believe him.

Imagine you, the child, in perpetual terror, not knowing when the violence will start again.

Now imagine the sorrow of watching your mother get hit, choked, and beaten.

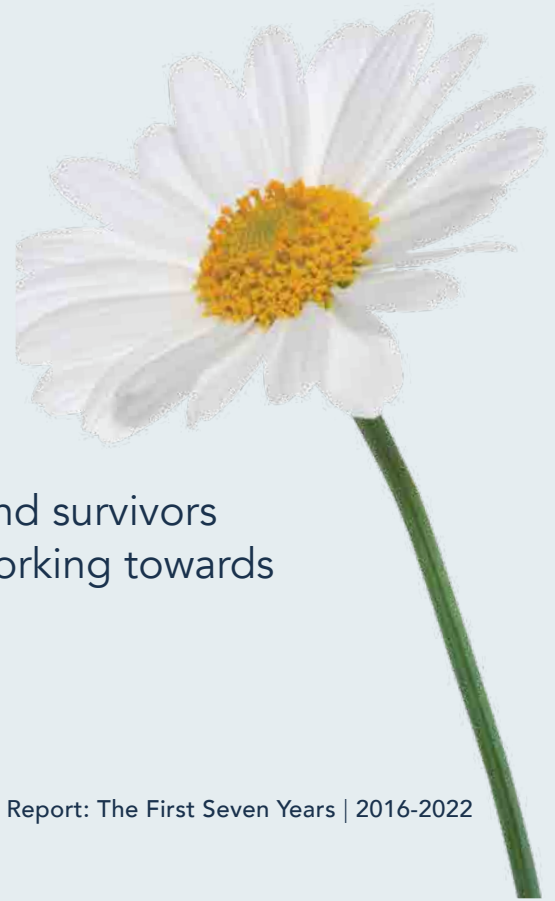

Imagine trying to intervene and receiving the abuser's fury. The frustration of not being able to stop it. The guilt that you made the situation worse.

Imagine divorcing the abuser.

The abuser uses the legal system to continue to control and harass the victim.

And often an abuser obtains custody of the children.

DALAC is committed to empowering victims and survivors of domestic abuse through legal advocacy – working towards breaking the cycle of domestic abuse.

WHO WE ARE:

Domestic Abuse Legal Advocacy Center, PSC (DALAC) is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit law firm.

Our approximately 45 volunteer attorneys provide trauma-informed pro bono legal services to victims and survivors of domestic abuse at shelters that our organization collaborates with in Minnesota.

We provide trainings and education at no cost to victims and survivors of domestic abuse, service providers, and the community with respect to legal rights, financial security, mental and physical health, and overall well-being.

OUR MISSION:

To stop the cycle of domestic abuse through legal advocacy.

WHY WE CARE:

75% of domestic violence-related homicides occur upon separation.

Studies show that victims need real, long-term alternatives to remaining in abusive relationships. In addition, only the availability of legal services in a county of shelter residence was found to reduce a victim's likelihood of abuse.

HOW WE DO THIS WORK:

DALAC is Centered on the Needs of Clients, Volunteer Attorneys and Shelter Advocates:

- We prohibit children from being present during meetings between the resident and the volunteer attorney. This policy is based on research showing the impact of trauma on a child's development.
- We are dedicated to ensuring the mental well-being of our volunteer attorneys and the shelters' advocates. It is not uncommon for those of us who work in this area to be impacted by the trauma, known as secondary or vicarious trauma, of those we serve.

Aamiina's Story

Name and facts have been altered for confidentiality.

Aamiina, her husband, and their two children fled their home country in fear of persecution. They settled in an apartment in Minneapolis. The new home didn't banish some of the old behaviors, as Aamiina's husband continued to physically abuse her and began abusing the children. After a particularly violent night, Aamiina and the kids found respite in a shelter.

A DALAC volunteer attorney was assigned to Aamiina to represent her in her Petition for an Ex Parte Order for Protection (OFP). Due to the nature of the allegations against the children's father, the court appointed a guardian ad litem to represent the best interests of the children. And, on an emergency basis, Aamiina was awarded temporary sole custody and the husband was prevented from having any contact with his children who did not want to see their father because they were afraid of him.

The husband denied physically harming anyone and said Aamiina was a liar who was merely upset with him because of the family's lack of money. The court ordered the husband removed from the family's apartment. Aamiina and her children moved back to their apartment, which was in a secure building where the children had friends.

Aamiina's husband violated the OFP 12 times. She called the police each time. Six times the police showed up. Each time, the husband fled before the police arrived, and they said they could do nothing for her.

After a trial, a judge granted Aamiina's OFP. However, instead of issuing the decision for the typical 24 months from the date the trial ended, the judge issued it from the date Aamiina requested her OFP. Therefore, in six months, Aamiina will need legal services again to request an extension of the OFP.

Her first case may have ended, but her family's fear has not.

WHAT OUR PARTNERS SAY:

"The legal system can be daunting—and at times overwhelming. Access to an [DALAC] attorney who understands the dynamics of domestic abuse and is trained in trauma-informed care, one who walks beside a victim and guides them through the court process, gives women the courage to secure the safety and justice they may be too frightened or intimidated to pursue on their own."

– Collaborating Shelter

"DALAC's service to our clientele and its expectations of the volunteer attorneys is simply unmatched. I have worked for over twenty years with individuals and organizations attempting to support survivors of domestic abuse. Nowhere have I encountered the kind of excellent holistic model of service provision that DALAC implements. Through its trauma-informed approach, DALAC inspires and then directly enables its attorneys to develop the characteristics that equips us to bring our best selves to the practice of law, which simultaneously transforms us into better attorneys."

– Heather Turner Morgan, Volunteer Attorney

OUR SUCCESSES:

An evaluation of our services shows that legal advocacy provided by DALAC is both attainable by those in need and effective in helping victims and survivors of domestic abuse safely exit abusive relationships and situations.

Our process for representing clients in OFPs has resulted in a 100%¹ win rate for cases that went to trial.

¹ One case where the abuser filed a counter-OFP concluded with the court denying both OFPs after a trial. This is considered a win by us because the abuser was prevented from obtaining an OFP on our client.
